

Corporate Associates

The Reliability, Maintainability and Supportability (RMS) Partnership serves as a global advocate for the embedding of the RMS principles and disciplines throughout the total life cycle of existing and emerging systems hardware and software (from concept development and design through manufacturing, operations, maintenance, support and redesign, remanufacturing, and/or disposal). Our goal is to ensure that the system engineering process is a holistic approach that addresses the ilities such as RMS and logistics early on, during, and throughout the total life cycle.

To help promote and achieve these goals the RMS Partnership engages in a number of outreach activities that have as their primary objective leader and practitioner education and training. Among these activities are: quarterly Government-Industry conferences that are workshop-intensive, publication of the quarterly RMS Partnership Newsletter with content that focuses on introducing state-of-the-art technologies, programs, policies, and procedures. In addition the RMS Partnership offers RMS&L courses at customer facilities and in conjunction with quarterly conferences. Consulting services are also available on-line, at customer faculties, and by telephone or a combination of each. The publication of a peer review electronic RMS professional Journal is scheduled for 2005. It will be hosted on the very well known, and often visited RMS Partnership Web site.

Since its founding in 1993, the RMS Partnership has been at the forefront of encouraging and supporting Government-Industry cooperation. For this reason and others, the RMS Partnership Web site continues to serve as the place that RMS&L professionals and non-professionals alike turn for expert knowledge, direction, and networking. The long-standing experience and professional integrity of the RMS Partnership has helped to establish its reputation as an "honest-broker" among its partners and colleagues in government and industry. Becoming a Corporate Associate with the RMS Partnership allows you to leverage our knowledge and expertise in government-industry endeavors, as well as, take advantage of specific benefits offered by the RMS Partnership.
